OVERVIEW

Our architect and engineering liability attorneys routinely defend claims on behalf of architects and engineers relating to professional malpractice. Each architect and engineering liability attorney is highly experienced in handling claims involving the preparation and implementation of specifications, drawings, supervision, and engineering judgment. Due to the inherent terms of this practice, our attorneys are highly knowledgeable in matters involving design defects, construction defects, contract interpretation, and liquidated damages claims.

Our lawyers understand the architectural and engineering fields from the beginning – development and design implementation – all the way through to construction and completion. Our attorneys routinely educate their clients on the importance of extensive documentation in the design and construction process, as well as counsel their clients so they understand the potential technicalities that can arise out of construction disputes. This practical experience provides added value to our architect and engineer clients to avoid liability at the front end and defend against litigation if necessary.
